TEACHING EXPERIENCE

Utah State University

Advanced Conflict Management* (CMST 5600, introduced Spring 2018)

This course introduces skills and materials that are useful for conflict management and consensus building. The class will discuss contemporary theories on conflict and communication and present skills and concepts to improve conflict outcomes. Finally, the class will engage in discussion and application of negotiation and mediation skills. The skills and concepts learned in this class will then be applied as a service learning project to a local organization.

Science Communication in an Alt-World (HONORS XXXX, Introduced Spring 2018) Communication is the bridge that connects the scientific community and the general public, and that interdisciplinary education in the realms of science and communication is the most effective tool to create engaged citizen scholars. In this course, our goal is to build a scientifically literate and civically-engaged community of students that are well-prepared to communicate scientific information to diverse groups and generate positive changes in their communities.

Interpersonal Communication (CMST 2600, twice a year Fall 2000- Spring 2004, Fall 05-12). This course emphasizes student-centered learning, with each pupil required to apply course content to a particular relationship in their lives. The course is taught with a combination of lecture and discussion.

Communication and Conflict* (CMST 3600, introduced Fall 01). This seminar focuses on the discussion of communication and conflict theory and the application of mediation, negotiation, and facilitation skills to dispute situations. This course also includes a service learning element.

Communication Criticism* (CMST 4460, introduced Spring 06). A rhetorical criticism class that is focused on understanding and analyzing contemporary persuasive texts.

Visual Communication* (CMST 5300, introduced Fall 09). This course utilizes rhetorical criticism methods to analyze artifacts to increase visual literacy and knowledge as to how images influence public argument.

Communication, Social Justice and the Environment (Previously Environmental Rhetoric)* (CMST 5250, introduced Spring 01). This senior seminar presents theories on communication, social justice and the environment. Students learn to differentiate various types of environmental issues and critically analyze how they are constructed in various media.

Communication and Conflict Management Workshop* (CMST 3600 Summer 04, 05, 08). This week-long workshop provides informed discussion on communication and conflict theory paired with the knowledge and application of dispute resolution skills.

Ione and Wayne Bennion Teachers' Workshop (Summer 2006). "Patriotism and Protest: Everyday Encounters with Democracy" A grant funded workshop for educators that examines ways to teach democracy. Co-taught with Kelli Cargile Cook and Jennifer Sinor.

New course constructed for the communication program.*

New course for the university*

Undergraduate Research and Design Studio

This course was a joint venture with the Business Innovation Factory and funded by a grant from the Lumina Foundation and from the Utah Board of Regents. The design studio focused on student led research and design by taking students through a design process (design question, solution, implementation) focused on ways to improve the USU student experience (USU 4900, Spring 2010-Fall 2011). The course was written up in the New England Journal of Higher Education (<http://www.nebhe.org/thejournal/the-student-experience-brought-to-you-by-students/>). See also: http://liberalis.usu.edu/2011/summer/designing_a_better_university.html; <http://www.businessinnovationfactory.com/projects/sxl/portfolio/participatory-design-studio> and <http://sxl02.businessinnovationfactory.com/>).

Service Learning Project

Integrated a service learning component into my Communication and Conflict course (CMST 3600). Students have presented a conflict management assembly to a local elementary school (Spring 2010) and did one-on-one conflict training with 2nd graders (Spring 2010); revamped a peer mediation program (Fall 2010) and then constructed one for another school (Summer 2011-Fall 2011); presented conflict management skills and trainings to local organization and groups (Spring 2011; Fall 2012, Fall 2017); and taught conflict management skills to a local 6th grade class (Spring 2012).

Spring 2018, an Advanced Communication and Conflict Course was created with the intent of providing even greater community engagement.
